LESSER EPIGRAPHY: BETWEEN PAPYRI AND INSCRIPTIONS

LUCIA CRISCUOLO
 Universität Bologna

It is well known that one of the main features of Egypt is the possibility to recover new documents which are completely lost in other regions of the ancient world, either because of their material or of their use. So from Egypt we have lots of papyri, ostraka, wax-tablets, wooden tablets and wooden inscriptions. The study of these texts is mainly and conventionally entrusted to Papyrology, but, as it will be shown, for some documents their content, and even their function, would suggest a better situation in Epigraphy, though in a kind of Epigraphy that could be considered as a “poor one”.

Im Anschluss bitten wir zu einem Glas Wein.
