Linguistic Ethnography of a Multilingual Call Center

London Calling

Series: Communicating in Professions and Organizations

- Provides a linguistic ethnography of institutional texts in a multilingual call center
- Explores key issues in the contemporary workplace including conditions of employment, recruitment, standardization practices, global reach and communication, and surveillance
- Offers new insights on contemporary debates about resistance, agency, and compliance in globalized workplaces
- Examines “the career of a call center script” as it evolves in its transit through an organizational hierarchy

This book presents an innovative institutional transpositional ethnography that examines the textual trajectory of “the life of a calling script” from production by corporate management and clients to recontextualization by middle management and finally to application by agents in phone interactions. Drawing on an extensive original research it provides a behind-the-scenes view of a multilingual call center in London and critiques the archetypal modern workplace practices including extensive use of monitoring and standardization and use of low-skilled precariat labor. In doing so, it offers fresh perspectives on contemporary debates about resistance, agency, and compliance in globalized workplaces. This study will provide a valuable resource to students and scholars of management studies, communication, sociolinguistics, and linguistic anthropology.
