

JOB OPENING FOR RESEARCH ASSISTANT

The Institute for Organization Design (IOD) is seeking a PhD or Master student to work as a research assistant, to begin as soon as possible. The work schedule is relatively flexible and limited in scope. The compensation is per hour work. The project is about a state-of-the-art topic in strategic management combined with advanced content analysis and offers unique insights of the IOD.

The IOD has a research and teaching focus on strategic management, organizational change, and organization design. In our empirical research, we cooperate with a network of international scholars at leading Business Schools (e.g., Wharton School, INSEAD, London Business School, University of Cambridge, Bocconi).

Tasks

- Research support for data analysis for a research project on behavioral decision-making.
- The main task involves reading and coding of company documents in English based on predefined categories and summarizing results in an Excel sheet.
- Follow-up tasks will be discussed according to progress of the research project.

Required Qualifications

- MSc or PhD student in management, linguistics, psychology and related fields
- Preferred consideration will be given to candidates with experience in content analysis
- Demonstrated ability to work on an empirical research project in an independent, diligent, and reliable manner
- Demonstrated ability of succeeding with an empirical data collection process
- Very good English communication skills (oral and written skills)
- Excellent analytical skills

Application

Please submit your application materials (CV, letter of interest, transcript of grades) to Prof. Patricia Klarner at iod@wu.ac.at until 20.03.2019.
